Over the past decade, Integrated Office Systems have emerged as the preferred industry approach to building systems. In the early 1990s Beta Sites were renovated to test early concepts and components of various manufacturers. By the mid 1990s test sites and small projects had been completed with encouraging degrees of success. Today, Integrated Office Systems are a standard in the National Master Specification for Public Works and Government Services Canada, and they are being widely utilized by the industry.

Terry E. Dods, President of Nocom Modular Wiring Systems, will present an overview of the industry's acceptance and implementation of Integrated Office Systems.

Guests are always welcome.
